

Sketch of Mr. Daniel's Remarks

their powers of the mind. Not on this occasion. The young Ladies were requested to express their opinion on a language, the substance of the text book having no reference to the question in the margin; and the Principal in conducting the discussion proposed such questions as were suggested by the subjects at the time. And the ease and promptness which the young Ladies exhibited in their replies, plainly showed that they had been taught upon proper principles, and that there was no set questions prepared beforehand. In the evening the ladies were again assembled in the hall, and delivered to the audience and young Ladies, by the Rev. L. Wiley. There was so much of chaste beauty, and appropriateness in the address, that could afford me much pleasure to give a brief synopsis, and present some few of the many beautiful passages that might be selected, were it not beyond the limits of this paper. The communication was in a manner too in which the company present, particularly the young ladies, were so much interested, that refreshments deserves a passing notice. In the interval between the morning and evening exercises, a bountiful supply of provisions were spread out on tables beneath the thick shade of the forest where the company engaged themselves in cultivating the social principle as well as in studying the elements of the body. In conclusion I mention that all separated in the evening, feeling that we had spent a day of mental and social enjoyment.

VISITOR.

Leasburg, Caswell, July 12.

te member in Congress, as well as the Legislare, a candidate for re-election; but knowing there

For the North Carolina Standard, RESPECT FOR THE DEAD.
At a large meeting of the citizens of Chatham county, held in the Court House in Pittsburg, Sunday, July 4, 1845, on motion Dr. John J. Banks was called to the Chair, and Aaron Harris and R. N. Green, Esqrs. appointed Secretaries. Col. Wm. P. Taylor then rose, and briefly stated the object of the meeting to be to consider what steps should be taken by the people of Chatham, in commemorating the services of General ANDREW JACKSON, whose death he announced in touching and eloquent terms.

He then adverted to the nature and principles of self-government—said the formation of our State

The Chair appointed Joseph Ramsey, O. A. U. member, Bird Gean, Sr., W. T. Horne, E. Grady and Capt. George Rodgers. And on motion, Wm. Steadman, Esq. was added to the Committee. The Committee then retired, and after consultation returned and reported the following as the result of the conference: "with regard to the tending over all the territory within the limits of

As citizens of the United States, it becomes our capacity of citizens, enjoying the benefits the wisest and most humane Constitution and laws, upon which the most perfect Governmen under the sun is established, to testify our attac ment to our country, and our gratitude for those who have been active and efficient in establish ing and perpetuating the inestimable privilege and blessings, which are conferred by the ...scouted by the aristocrats and mondecease of General Andrew Jackson, of the State of Tennessee—a man, the mention of whose name is sufficient to inspire the heart of every friend of man; and whose life, with every sentiment of lofty gratification and laudable ambition, was devoted to the promotion of peace and to strike terror and engender envy only to the tyrants, and those who mingle thoughts of selfishness with the equal distribution of rights, the happiness of the people, and the good of man. De nobis et nostris bonum, is a sacred maxim, which even the most unfeeling naturally observe; but this

...said he, and with great truth, to perpetuate obedience to this rule, that we speak of Andrew Jackson. We speak of him, and we honor him for all those disinterested services and glories which have given him a fame as enduring in time itself, and for those excellent attributes which please God and dignify man. If true devotion, inflexible integrity, and stern constancy to the interests of his country; if undaunted courage, unflinching patriotism, unswerving virtue and rectitude; if general and disinterested philanthropy, and distinguished statesmanship; if superior military skill, tact, and management; if sup-had no disposition to re-ignite and inflame exclusive and indefatigable devotion of fifty years to the service of his countrymen, during which time he braved and battled with the dangers and fatigues—the trials and privations, and the sorrows and horrors of two wars, and covered himself and his followers with distinction, and enriched the name of his country and his countrymen with brilliant glory; if these considerations inspire us with sentiments of gratitude, and excite our pride and admiration, and demand n's wide difference between the two great parties of the country as to the policy of the Federal due to Andrew Jackson. We honor him, not much because he was a skilled tactician, not because he was an able statesman and an eminent distinguished politician; nor yet for his wholehearted generosity and high integrity of purpose. We honor him chiefly, and pay tribute to him mostly for his manly and patriotic exertions in behalf of his country and his country's rights which have embalmed his memory in the "heart ference to the administration of the government and their tendencies the same—that in the ments" of every loyal American citizen. The story of Gen. Jackson, from the time he first took up arms at the age of 13, under the glorious banner, till his withdrawal from public life in 1821, is full of thrilling interest to the true patriot and the contemplative philanthropist, and contains information to those who study the good happiness of his fellow men; and from the year '36 to the period of his death, it is confirmation of those truths and principles upon which to withdraw the government from under the feet of the people to a great extent, and to His chief happiness depends, and gratifying encouragement to those who trust in, and act upon the teachings of those principles. In short, Garrison's career was eminently useful, gratifying, brilliant; and abounds in all those glorious movements and generous acts which elevate and distinguish a great man. It behoves us American citizens, to pay some tribute to his memory. Therefore,

Resolved, That we will wear crepe on the cy. This principle of construction the demonstrators resisted. They went for strict construction

Resolved, That the citizens of the County of Chatham, without distinction, be invited to unite with us on Monday, 21st inst., in manifesting in suitable manner, our veneration and affection for our late President, Mr. Andrew Jackson, and our sincere and heartfelt sorrow at the dispensation of Providence which has removed him from the sphere of earthly action.

asures of the parties were fully known, manifest-their preference for the Republican or demo-

Resolved. That the Chairman of this meeting appoint a Committee of Arrangements, to be in concert with the Committee previously appointed by the fraternity of Masons, to make necessary and convenient preparations for the proper observance of the day.

politicians of that day, led them eagerly to embrace a system of measures the professed object of

of the day; and that he likewise appoint Marshal and two Assistant Marshals to superintend the Procession.

Resolved, That the merchants and other business men of Pittsboro<sup>2</sup> be requested to close their shops on that day, and that they, and likewise the citizens generally, be requested to suspend all business during the day.

The Chairman appointed Jos. Ramsey, O. A. Alderman, Bird Gran, Sen., W. T. Horne, Gen.

only be tested by experience. As soon as its acts were tested and its principles scrutinized,

Under the third Resolution, Messrs. Jos. R.